

Canola Breeders appoints first eastern rep

Canola Breeders has appointed a key point of contact for canola growers and their advisers in New South Wales and Victoria.

David Leah joined Canola Breeders this month as the company's first eastern states Territory Manager.

Mr Leah comes fresh from a research and development role with Agrisearch Services, where he spent nine years managing research projects including variety trials and herbicide evaluations.

Originally from a mixed farm in southern New South Wales near Gerogery, he is now based in Wagga Wagga.

"It is an exciting time to join Canola Breeders," Mr Leah said.

"We are releasing some remarkable varieties for 2010, including the world's first triazine tolerant hybrid canola varieties, some excellent new open pollinated canola varieties and the next generation in Roundup Ready® hybrids," he said.

Canola Breeders is a progressive, technology-driven company, now distributing seed through major retail networks in Victoria and New South Wales. For more information, visit www.canolabreeders.com.au.
